ORDER

vs. )

(M/Sanctions and Compel - #92)

VEGAS CONSTRUCTION COMPANY, )
 INC, et al., )

Defendants. )

Before the court is plaintiffs' ("Great American") Motion for Sanctions and to Compel (#92) filed October 25, 2007. The court has considered the motion (#92), Loosvelt's Declaration (#93) in support of the motion, Distinctive Homes' opposition (#102), and plaintiffs' Reply (#104).

BACKGROUND

This is an action brought by Great American to recover a portion of settlement proceeds paid by Great American to settle a lawsuit against Distinctive Homes in an underlying construction defect case. Great American filed this declaratory relief action seeking a judgment that a portion of the settlement proceeds it paid to settle the underlying litigation was for damages not covered under its policies. Specifically, Great American asserts some of the defects or damages alleged in the underlying action which it paid to settle (1) do not constitute "property damage" within the meaning of the policies; and/or (2) are excluded from coverage by the "Your Work" exclusion in the policies. In the underlying action (the "Villa Pacifica" litigation), Great American and other insurers of Distinctive Homes retained the law firm of Lee & Russell to defend the insured against construction defect claims brought by the Villa Pacifica Homeowners Association and homeowners.

1 On June 18, 2007, Great American served Distinctive Homes with a Notice of Deposition (#92
2 at Exh. "1") pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, setting the deposition 3 for July 24, 2007. The notice contained 23 subjects of examination mostly related to the work
4 Distinctive Homes performed on the Villa Pacifica construction project, its participation in settlement 5 negotiations and payments in the Villa Pacifica case, and its discovery responses in the instant case.
6 Distinctive Homes did not object to or seek a protective order regarding any of the examination topics.
7 Distinctive Homes informed Great American that its 30(b)(6) representative, Anthony Musso, was out 8 of the country during the discovery period, which ended on July 30, 2007. The parties therefore agreed 9 to depose Musso on September 19, 2007.

10 In its motion (#92), Great American claims Musso was completely unprepared to testify at his 11 deposition. According to Great American, Musso admitted on the record that he had done nothing to 12 prepare for the deposition and had not even read the subjects of deposition contained in the notice.
13 Counsel for Distinctive Homes Robert Martin stated at the deposition that the company's only 14 obligation was to designate and produce a 30(b)(6) representative, which it had done. Great American 15 asserts Musso was unable to recall many of the documents Distinctive Homes had produced relating to 16 the topics of examination or testify about 16 of the topics. Great American offered to postpone the 17 deposition to allow Distinctive Homes to designate a different 30(b)(6) witness, but the offer was 18 rejected. Counsel for the parties met and conferred by telephone following the deposition, but 19 Distinctive Homes refused to produce another 30(b)(6) witness or pay Great American's expenses 20 incurred in deposing Musso even though counsel for Distinctive Homes acknowledged it had a duty to 21 prepare its representative for the deposition. Great American now seeks monetary sanctions equivalent 22 to its reasonable expenses incurred in preparing for and conducting Musso's deposition and bringing 23 this motion. Great American also requests an order precluding Distinctive Homes from offering 24 evidence at trial on the subjects of examination Musso could not testify upon, including the scope of 25 work Distinctive Homes d/b/a Nevada Shelter did or did not perform on the construction project.

26 In response (#102), Distinctive Homes asserts Great American has failed to produce discovery 27 concerning how it allocated $135,000 of the $540,000 it paid to settle the Villa Pacifica lawsuit as non-28 covered items of damages. Great American's Rule 30(b)(6) designee, Glenn Isom, reportedly testified

1 that no one at Great American had ever calculated the damages plaintiffs seek to recover in this lawsuit, 2 and was unable to testify about the factual bases for the damages alleged in this case. Distinctive 3 Homes accuses Great American of trying to divert attention from its “wholesale lack of evidence 4 regarding its damages” by waging “a war of attrition against its insured.”

5 Distinctive Homes also argues Musso adequately prepared for the deposition by discussing the 6 scope of the deposition with counsel prior to the deposition and reviewing the documents and discovery 7 responses Distinctive Homes produced during discovery. Musso’s preparation enabled him to provide 8 deposition testimony sufficient to bind Distinctive Homes. Distinctive Homes argues that Musso 9 answered Great American’s questions to the extent he could recall, and that his responses were 10 reasonable given the scope of the questioning about 168 townhouse units constructed over a decade 11 ago. Counsel for Distinctive Homes also points out that he stipulated to the authenticity of the 12 documents placed in the document repository during the underlying litigation in writing prior to the 13 deposition, and confirmed that stipulation at the onset of Mr. Musso’s deposition on the record.

14 Distinctive Homes argues that compelling a further 30(b)(6) deposition would not result in the 15 discovery of any additional information not already provided by Mr. Musso’s testimony and Distinctive 16 Homes’ written discovery responses. Distinctive Homes contends that it met its obligation under Rule 17 30(b)(6) to produce a prepared designee for deposition because the rule only requires the corporation to 18 provide a witness concerning matters known or reasonably available to the corporation. In this case, 19 nearly 100,000 documents were placed in the document repository in the underlying case and available 20 to all parties, including Great American. Mr. Musso cannot be expected to recall the contents of these 21 100,000 documents, and Distinctive Homes affirmatively represents that it has no reason to dispute the 22 information contained in the documents themselves. Thus, additional deposition testimony “would 23 only place Great American in the exact same position that it currently stands” and a further Rule 24 30(b)(6) deposition is, therefore, unnecessary. The documents it produced are the most reliable source 25 of information regarding the work performed on the construction project. Finally, Distinctive Homes 26 contends there is no factual dispute concerning Distinctive Homes’ participation in settlement 27 conferences or contribution toward settlement and therefore no additional deposition is necessary on 28 this topic. Distinctive Homes therefore argues sanctions are not warranted under the circumstances.

In reply, (#104) Great American argues Musso's admission that he had done nothing to prepare for the deposition and his inability to offer testimony regarding any of the topics of examination are evidence of his lack of preparation. Great American claims Distinctive Homes still had the duty to prepare Musso to testify on the topics of examination despite the fact that the documents Distinctive Homes produced during discovery might contain this information. Moreover, Distinctive Homes' failure to address Great American's request for issue preclusion sanctions admits that such sanctions are warranted.

DISCUSSION

A. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6):

Rule 30(b)(6)<sup>1</sup> of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides, in pertinent part:

A party may in the party's notice and in the subpoena name as the deponent a public or private corporation or a partnership or association or governmental agency and describe with reasonable particularity the matters on which examination is requested. In that event, the organization so named shall designate one or more officers, directors, or managing agents, or other persons who consent to testify on its behalf, and may set forth, for each person designated, the matters on which the person will testify.

The persons so designated shall testify as to the matters known or reasonably available to the organization

The purpose of the rule is to streamline the discovery process. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Southern Union Co, Inc., 985 F.2d 196, 197 (5th Cir. 1993). It serves a unique function in allowing for a specialized form of deposition. Sprint Commc's Co., L.P. v. Theglobe.com, Inc., 236 F.R.D. 524, 527 (D. Kan. 2006). The rule "gives the corporation being deposed more control by allowing it to designate and prepare a witness to testify on the corporation's behalf." U.S. v. Taylor, 166 F.R.D. 356,

<sup>1</sup> Effective December 1, 2007, the language of Rule 30 was amended to make style and terminology changes consistent throughout the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The deposition in dispute here, in the motion to compel, was filed prior to the effective date of the amendments to the Rules of Civil procedure. The portion of the Rule quoted in this order refers to the way it was worded prior to the December 1, 2007, amendments.

1 360 (M.D.N.C. 1996). It is a discovery device employed by the examining party “to avoid the 2 ‘bandying’ by corporations where individual officers disclaim knowledge of facts clearly known to the 3 corporation.” Id. Or, as another district court articulated,

4           One of the purposes of Rule 30(b)(6) is to curb any temptation a 5           corporation might have to shunt a discovering party from “pillar to post” 6           by presenting deponents who each disclaims knowledge of facts clearly known to someone in the organization.

7 Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Butcher, 116 F.R.D. 196, 199 (E.D. Tenn. 1986).

8           Rule 30(b)(6) imposes burdens on both the discovering party and the designating party. The 9 party seeking discovery through a Rule 30(b)(6) deposition is required to describe “with reasonable 10 particularity the matters on which examination is requested.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6). Once served 11 with the deposition notice under Rule 30(b)(6), the responding party is required to produce one or more 12 witnesses knowledgeable about the subject matter of the noticed topics. Marker v. Union Fidelity Life 13 Insurance Company, 125 F.R.D. 121, 126 (M.D.N.C. 1989).

14           The testimony of a Rule 30(b)(6) designee “represents the knowledge of the corporation, not of 15 the individual deponents.” U.S. v. Taylor, 166 F.R.D. at 361; Hyde v. Stanley Tools, 107 F. Supp. 2d 16 992 (E.D. La., 2000); Sprint Communications Co. v. The Globe.Com, Inc., 236 F.R.D. at 527. A 17 Rule 30(b)(6) designee presents the corporation’s position on the noticed topics. United States v.
 18 Massachusetts Indus. Finance Agency, 162 F.R.D. 410, 412 (D. Mass. 1995). A corporation has a duty 19 under Rule 30(b)(6) to provide a witness who is knowledgeable in order to provide “binding answers on 20 behalf of the corporation”. Starlight International, Inc. v. Herlihy, 186 F.R.D. 626, 638 (D. Kan. 1999).
 21 A Rule 30(b)(6) designee is not required to have personal knowledge on the designated subject matter.
 22 Sprint Communications, 236 F.R.D. at 528; PPM Finance v. Norandal, 297 F. Supp. 2d 1072, 1085-86
 23 (N.D. Ill., 2004); Calzaturificio v. Fabiano Shoe Co., Inc., 201 F.R.D. 33, 37 (D. Mass. 2001).

24           The designating party has a duty to designate more than one deponent if necessary to respond to 25 relevant areas of inquiry on the noticed topics. Id. Barron v. Caterpillar, Inc., 168 F.R.D. 175, 176
 26 (E.D. Pa. 1996); Starlight International, Inc. v. Herlihy, 186 F.R.D. 627, 638 (D. Kan. 1999)
 27 (corporation must produce “such number of persons as will satisfy the request”); In re: Vitamins 28 Antitrust Litigation, 216 F.R.D. 168, 172 (D.D.C. 2003); Securities & Exchange Comm’n v. Morelli,

1 143 F.R.D. 42, 45 (S.D.N.Y. 1992); Reilly v. Natwest Markets Group, Inc., 181 F.3d 253, 268 (2d Cir.
2 1999).

3 Rule 30(b)(6) is not designed to be a memory contest. Bank of New York v. Meridien BIAO 4 Bank Tanzania LTD, 171 F.R.D. 135, 150 (S.D.N.Y. 1997). However, a corporation has “a duty to 5 make a conscientious, good-faith effort to designate knowledgeable persons for Rule 30(b)(6) 6 depositions and to prepare them to fully and unequivocally answer questions about the designated subject 7 matter.” Starlight International, Inc. v. Herlihy, 186 F.R.D. at 639; Dravo Corp. v. Liberty Mut. Ins.
8 Co., 164 F.R.D. 70, 75 (D. Neb. 1995) (“If the rule is to promote effective discovery regarding 9 corporations, the spokesperson must be informed.”); In re: Vitamins Antitrust Litigation, 216 F.R.D.
10 at 172 (corporation is obligated to produce one or more Rule 30(b)(6) witnesses who are thoroughly 11 educated about the noticed deposition topics and facts known to the corporation or its counsel).

12 The duty to prepare a Rule 30(b)(6) designee goes beyond matters personally known to the 13 witness or to matters in which the designated witness was personally involved. Buycks-Roberson v.
14 City Bank Federal Sav. Bank, 162 F.R.D. 338, 343 (N. D. Ill. 1995); FCC v. Morelli, 143 F.R.D. 42, 45
15 (S.D.N.Y. 1992). The duty to produce a prepared witness on designated topics extends to matters not 16 only within the personal knowledge of the witness but on matters reasonably known by the responding 17 party. Alexander v. Federal Bureau of Investigation, 186 F.R.D. 137, 141 (D.D.C. 1998). “By its very 18 nature, a Rule 30(b)(6) deposition notice requires the responding party to prepare a designated 19 representative so that he or she can testify on matters not only within his or her personal knowledge, but 20 also on matters reasonably known by the responding entity.” Alliance v. District of Columbia, 437 F.
21 Supp.2d 32, 37 (D.D.C. 2006), citing Alexander, supra, at 141.

22 The fact that an organization no longer has a person with knowledge on the designated topics 23 does not relieve the organization of the duty to prepare a Rule 30(b)(6) designee. Taylor, 166 F.R.D. at 24 361. There, the court recognized that it is not uncommon to find that a corporation no longer employs 25 individuals who have memory of distant events, or to find that individuals with knowledge are 26 deceased. Id. “These problems do not relieve a corporation from preparing its Rule 30(b)(6) designee 27 to the extent matters are reasonably available, whether from documents, past employees, or other 28 sources.” Id. A party producing a Rule 30(b)(6) witness “must prepare deponents by having them

1 review prior fact witness deposition testimony as well as documents and deposition exhibits.” Id. at 2 362.

3 The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not permit a party served with a Rule 30(b)(6) 4 deposition notice or subpoena request “to elect to supply the answers in a written response to an 5 interrogatory” in response to a Rule 30(b)(6) deposition notice or subpoena request. Marker v.
6 Union Fidelity Life Insurance, 125 F.R.D. 121, 126 (M.D.N.C. 1989). “Because of its nature, the 7 deposition process provides a means to obtain more complete information and is, therefore, favored.” 8 Id. Similarly, in responding to a Rule 30(b)(6) notice or subpoena, a corporation may not take the 9 position that its documents state the company’s position. In re: Vitamins Antitrust Litigation, 216 10 F.R.D. at 172, 174. There, the defendants produced a timeline of events relevant to the litigation based 11 on interviews of former employees and a review of accompanying documents and took the position at a 12 Rule 30(b)(6) deposition that because statements of former employees are imputed to the company by 13 operation of law, the timelines “spoke for themselves” and the corporation need not produce a Rule 14 30(b)(6) deponent to provide an explanation. The court rejected this argument, stating:

15 Bioproducts’ objection rests on a misinterpretation of Rule 30(b)(6) and a 16 mistaken view that mere authentication of the documents submitted with 17 a corresponding disavowal of the truth or accuracy of the documents is 18 sufficient to satisfy the requirements of Rule 30(b)(6). . . . [there is] 19 nothing in the rules or caselaw that would justify [such an] understanding 20 of a sufficient Rule 30(b)(6) deposition.

21 Id. at 172.

22 Several courts have recognized that preparing a Rule 30(b)(6) designee may be an onerous task 23 and that it is not uncommon for a corporation to claim:

24 . . . that it no longer employs individuals who have memory of a distant 25 event or that such individuals are deceased. . . . These problems do not 26 relieve a corporation from preparing its Rule 30(b)(6) designee to the 27 extent matters are reasonably available, whether from documents, past 28 employees, or other sources.

29 Taylor, 166 F.R.D. at 360-61 (internal citations omitted). Although adequately preparing a Rule 30 30(b)(6) deposition can be burdensome, “this is merely the result of the concomitant obligation from 31 the privilege of being able to use the corporate form in order to conduct business.” Id. at 362. Sprint, 32 236 F.R.D. at 528 (acknowledging compliance with Rule 30(b)(6) may be onerous but that the Rule’s

1 requirements “negate any possibility that an inquiring party will be directed back and forth from one 2 corporate representative to another, vainly searching for a deponent who is able to provide a response 3 which would be binding on that corporation.”)

4 Finally, if an organization designates a witness it believes in good faith would be able to provide 5 knowledgeable responsive testimony and it becomes apparent during the deposition that the designee 6 produced is unable to respond to relevant areas of inquiry, the responding party has a duty to designate 7 an additional knowledgeable deponent. Marker, 125 F.R.D. at 126; Dravo Corp. v. Liberty Mut. Ins.
8 Co., 164 F.R.D. 70, 75 (D. Neb. 1995); Starlight, 186 F.R.D. at 638; Sony v. Soundview Technologies, 9 217 F.R.D. 104, 112 (D. Conn. 2002).

10 ANALYSIS

11 Applying these principles to the dispute in the case at bar, the court finds Distinctive Homes has 12 not complied with its obligations under Rule 30(b)(6) to produce one or more witnesses knowledgeable 13 about the subject matter of the noticed topics. Initially, there is no dispute that Great American served a 14 Rule 30(b)(6) deposition notice describing the subject matters on which examination was requested 15 with reasonable particularity. Distinctive Homes did not object to the deposition notice outlining 16 twenty-three subjects of examination, and did not seek a protective order regarding any of the 17 examination topics. Distinctive Homes’ opposition to the motion for sanctions and to compel does not 18 claim Great American failed to describe the matters on which examination was requested with 19 reasonable particularity. Rather, Distinctive Homes asserts that Mr. Musso was properly designated as 20 a Rule 30(b)(6) designee because he was the most knowledgeable person available, and that he 21 answered questions to the extent he could recall.

22 The undersigned has reviewed the transcript of Mr. Musso’s deposition and finds Distinctive 23 Homes failed to meet its obligation to make a conscientious, good faith effort to produce a thoroughly 24 educated witness about the noticed deposition topics and facts known to the corporation or its counsel.
25 Mr. Musso repeatedly testified that he did not know the details of Distinctive Homes’ scope of work on 26 the Villa Pacifica project, that he was not familiar with the “paperwork” and that he was not familiar 27 enough with what happened on the project to be able to answer questions definitively. When shown 28 documents in an effort to refresh his recollection, he often testified the paperwork did not refresh his

1 recollection. During the course of the deposition as he was shown more documents, he was able to 2 provide slightly more information, but was clearly not able to provide complete, knowledgeable and 3 unevasive answers on the subjects of examination described in the Rule 30(b)(6) deposition notice.

4 In opposing this motion, Distinctive Homes claims Mr. Musso cannot address the majority of 5 the noticed deposition topics because of the passage of time since the Villa Pacifica project was built 6 and because all of the project's documents were turned over to defense counsel retained by the insured 7 to represent it, and placed in a common document repository in the underlying action. Counsel for 8 Distinctive Homes took the position at Mr. Musso's deposition that the corporation's only obligation 9 was to provide a person most knowledgeable which Mr. Musso is "because there is no one else at 10 Distinctive Homes that is anywhere near as knowledgeable on the subject." (Musso Transcript, 11 Exhibit "2" to Plaintiffs' Motion (#92), 13:23-14:9.) When told by opposing counsel that the 12 corporation had a duty to prepare its witness, counsel for Distinctive Homes responded "[t]o the extent 13 that anyone has knowledge, Mr. Musso is that person." (Id. at 14:6-9.) Counsel for Distinctive Homes 14 later acknowledged, in the meet and confer process, that its obligations were to produce an educated 15 witness, but still takes the position Mr. Musso's designation was reasonable because he provided 16 responses on the noticed topics on matters "reasonably available" to the corporation under the 17 circumstances. The court flatly rejects these arguments.

18 Great American was entitled to the knowledge of the corporation and the corporation's position 19 on matters clearly relevant and discoverable in this case. Distinctive Homes had a duty to present a 20 Rule 30(b)(6) witness to provide a knowledgeable witness to address the noticed topics, provide the 21 corporation's position, and provide answers to bind the corporation. The fact that Distinctive Homes 22 may no longer employ a person with knowledge on the designated topics did not relieve it of the duty to 23 prepare a properly educated Rule 30(b)(6) designee. As the court recognized in Taylor, supra, it is not 24 uncommon to find that a corporation no longer employs individuals who have memory of distant 25 events, or to find that individuals with knowledge are deceased. 166 F.R.D. at 361. "These problems 26 do not relieve a corporation from preparing its Rule 30(b)(6) designee to the extent matters are 27 reasonably available, whether from documents, past employees, or other sources." Id.

28 ///

1 Similarly, the court rejects Distinctive Homes' arguments that stipulating to the authenticity of 2 the documents placed in the document repository provided all of the discoverable information to which 3 Great American is entitled, and stated the company's position. Producing documents and responding to 4 written discovery is not a substitute for providing a thoroughly educated Rule 30(b)(6) deponent. As 5 the cases cited in this order make clear, the two forms of discovery are not equivalent, In re: Vitamins, 6 216 F.R.D. at 174, and depositions provide a more complete means to obtain information and are,
7 therefore, favored. Marker, 125 F.R.D. at 126. Distinctive Homes was required to educate an 8 appropriate Rule 30(b)(6) designee to provide knowledgeable answers reasonably available to the 9 corporation, which include information ascertainable from project files and documents in the repository, 10 information from past employees, witness testimony and exhibits, or any other sources available to the 11 corporation, including factual information learned through or from its counsel. As the court in a recent 12 decision noted:

13 When a corporation produces an employee under Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6) 14 to testify to corporate knowledge, the employee must provide responsive 15 underlying factual information even though such information was transmitted through a firm's corporate lawyers.

16 Sprint Communications, supra, 236 F.R.D. at 529, citing Security Ins. Co. of Hartford v. Trustmark Ins.
17 Co., 218 F.R.D. 29, 34 (D. Conn. 2003). Facts communicated to an attorney are not protected by the 18 attorney-client privilege. Upjohn Co v. United States, 449 U.S. 383, 395-96 (1981). "Moreover, clients 19 cannot refuse to disclose facts which their attorneys conveyed to them and which the attorneys obtained 20 from independent sources." Sprint, citing, Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 508 (1947).

21 In this case, Mr. Musso may have been the person best situated to testify concerning the Villa 22 Pacifica project based on his position with and duration of his relationship with the company.
23 However, he was wholly unprepared to provide meaningful answers. It is clear from a review of the 24 transcript of his deposition, that very little time was spent educating Mr. Musso to provide full, 25 complete and unevasive answers to the questions about these designated topics. He testified that he had 26 not even read the deposition notice in its entirety, had only spoken "briefly" with counsel, and had not 27 done anything to prepare to answer questions on the noticed topics. When it became apparent early in 28 the deposition that Mr. Musso was unable to speak knowledgeably on behalf of the corporation on the majority of the noticed topics, counsel for Great American offered to adjourn the deposition to permit Distinctive Homes to produce an adequately prepared witness. Counsel for Distinctive Homes declined this overture, taking the position it had met its Rule 30(b)(6) obligations by merely designating a witness to address the deposition topics.

When a party designates a witness it believes in good faith will be able to provide knowledgeable answers and the witness is unable to do so, the designating party has a duty to substitute another person once the deficiency of its Rule 30(b)(6) designee becomes apparent during the deposition. Marker, supra, at 126. During the meet and confer process, counsel for Distinctive Homes eventually acknowledged it had a duty under Rule 30(b)(6) to prepare its designated witness for the deposition, but still takes the position Mr. Musso's testimony was adequate given the scope of the questioning, the passage of time since the project was built, and the fact that the documents for the project are the best evidence of what happened. As the cases cited in this decision and order make clear, this position is untenable.

B. Sanctions

Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(d) allows the court to impose various sanctions for a party's failure to comply with Rule 30(b)(6). "The Rule provides a panoply of sanctions, from the imposition of costs to entry of default." Taylor, 166 F.R.D. at 363; Resolution Trust Corp. v. Southern Union, 995 F.2d 196 at 197. A number of courts have held that the failure to produce a Rule 30(b)(6) designee who is adequately educated and prepared to testify on designated topics to bind the corporation amounts to a nonappearance which could warrant the imposition of sanctions. Bank of New York, 171 F.R.D. at 151; Resolution Trust Corp., 985 F.2d at 197; Taylor, 166 F.R.D. at 363; Black Horse Lane Assoc. v. Dow Chemical Corp., 228 F.3d 275, 303 (3d Cir. 2000). In Resolution Trust, the Fifth Circuit held that the district court did not abuse its discretion in awarding fees and costs under Rule 37(d) when the corporation produced an unprepared Rule 30(b)(6) designee stating:

When a corporation or association designates a person to testify on its behalf, the corporation appears vicariously through the agent. If that agent is not knowledgeable about relevant facts, and the principal has failed to designate an available, knowledgeable, and readily identifiable witness, then the appearance is, for all practical purposes, no appearance at all.

Id.

1 In Black Horse, the Third Circuit found that the purpose of Rule 30(b)(6) would be frustrated if 2 courts allowed a corporate party to produce a witness who is unable or unwilling to provide necessary 3 factual information and held that producing an unprepared witness is tantamount to a failure to appear, 4 and sanctionable under Rule 37(d). The Court of Appeals observed that a Rule 30(b)(6) witness who is 5 unable to give useful information “is no more present for deposition than would be a deponent who 6 physically appears for the deposition but sleeps through it.” Id. at 304.

7 Courts have imposed a variety of sanctions for the failure to produce an adequately prepared 8 Rule 30(b)(6) deponent which include: (1) costs and attorneys’ fees incurred in filing a motion to 9 compel, In re: Vitamins, 216 F.R.D. at 175, Black Horse, 228 F.3d at 300, 304; (2) monetary sanctions 10 against the non-complying party and its counsel, In re: Vitamins, 216 F.R.D. at 175; (3) an order 11 compelling compliance with Rule 30(b)(6) and requiring an educated deponent to be produced, Foster-12 Miller, Inc., v. Babcock & Wilcox Canada, 210 F.3d 1, 17 (also awarding costs and fees incurred in 13 bringing the motion to compel), Sony, 217 F.R.D. at 112, Alliance, 437 F. Supp. 2d at 38; (4) requiring 14 a corporation to redesignate an adequately prepared witness to testify in the new deposition at the 15 corporation’s expense, F.D.I.C. v. Butcher, 116 F.R.D. at 202; Marker, 125 F.R.D. at 126-27.

16 In Reilly v. Natwest Markets Group, supra, the Second Circuit held that the district court did not 17 abuse its discretion in precluding two witnesses from testifying on subject matters for which a Rule 18 30(b)(6) designee was unable to provide knowledgeable and specific responses. The court observed, 19 “[w]hen a party fails to comply with Rule 30(b)(6), Rule 37 allows courts to impose various sanctions, 20 including the preclusion of evidence.” 181 F.R.D. at 268. The Court of Appeals identified the factors 21 the court should consider before precluding witness testimony for violating Rule 30(b)(6):

22 (1) the party’s explanation for the failure to comply with the discovery 23 order; (2) the importance of the testimony of the precluded witness; 24 (3) the prejudice suffered by the opposing party as a result of having to prepare to meet the new testimony; and (4) the possibility of a continuance.

25 Id. at 269. The district court found that the defendant had not explained why the witnesses were not 26 available for deposition, the two witnesses whose testimony was precluded would have provided 27 cumulative testimony, the plaintiff would be prejudiced by not having an opportunity to depose the two 28 precluded witnesses, and that delaying the trial to allow the plaintiff to conduct a deposition was

1 unwarranted. The Second Circuit, therefore, affirmed the trial court's preclusion order. However, 2 sanctions that preclude a party from introducing evidence are typically reserved only for flagrant 3 discovery abuses. Bank of New York, 171 F.R.D. at 151-52.

4 Distinctive Homes failed to meet its obligations under Rule 30(b)(6) when it produced Mr.
5 Musso who was wholly unprepared to testify on the majority of the noticed deposition topics.
6 Distinctive Homes had a duty to educate a witness to provide complete, knowledgeable and unequivocal 7 answers to questions on the noticed topics, to state the corporation's position, and to provide binding 8 answers on behalf of the corporation. The fact that Distinctive Homes may no longer employ 9 individuals who worked on the Villa Pacifica project, or who have memory of it does not relieve the 10 corporation of its obligation to prepare its Rule 30(b)(6) designee to the extent matters are reasonably 11 available to it. The court finds Mr. Musso's inability to provide knowledgeable answers about the 12 majority of the noticed deposition topics was tantamount to a nonappearance, and warrants sanctions.
13 The court will award Great American reasonable costs and attorney's fees incurred in taking Mr.
14 Musso's deposition, and in filing this motion to compel and reply brief. The court will also compel 15 Distinctive Homes to produce a thoroughly educated, knowledgeable Rule 30(b)(6) designee to address 16 the noticed topics as to any claims which survive the parties' pending motions for partial summary 17 judgment.

18 The court will deny, however, Great American's request for preclusion sanctions. Under the 19 circumstances presented here, precluding Distinctive Homes from offering evidence at trial on the 20 subjects of examination Mr. Musso could not address, which include the scope of work Distinctive 21 Homes d/b/a Nevada Shelter did or did not perform on the construction project would be 22 disproportionate to the discovery violation. Additionally, a trial is intended to be a search for the truth.
23 Precluding Distinctive Homes from offering evidence at trial on all of the noticed topics would not 24 advance the pursuit of truth in adjudicating this case on the merits.

25 For all of the foregoing reasons,

26 IT IS ORDERED that Great American's Motion for Sanctions and to Compel (#92) is 27 GRANTED in part and DENIED in part as follows:

28 ///

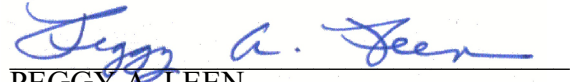

1. The motion is GRANTED to the extent the court will impose sanctions in the form of reasonable costs and attorney's fees incurred in preparing for and taking the deposition of Distinctive Homes' Rule 30(b)(6) designee, and reasonable costs and attorney's fees incurred in filing the motion to compel and reply.
2. Distinctive Homes shall be compelled to produce one or more thoroughly educated, knowledgeable witness(es) able to answer questions, provide the corporation's position and bind the corporation on the noticed deposition topics as to any claims or counterclaims which survive the pending motions for partial summary judgment. Distinctive Homes shall produce one or more substitute Rule 30(b)(6) designee(s) to address the noticed topics as to any claims surviving the pending motions for partial summary judgment no later than thirty days after decision of the motions.
3. Great American's request for issue preclusion sanctions and any other form of relief not specifically addressed in this order are DENIED.
4. Counsel for plaintiffs shall, no later than 15 days from entry of this order, serve and file a memorandum, supported by the affidavit of counsel, establishing the amount of attorneys' fees and costs incurred in bringing its motion. The memorandum shall provide a reasonable itemization and description of the work performed, identify the attorney(s) or other staff member(s) performing the work, the attorney(s) or staff member(s) customary fee for such work, and the experience, reputation and ability of the attorney performing the work. The attorney's affidavit shall authenticate the information contained in the memorandum, provide a statement that the bill has been reviewed and edited, and a statement that the fees and costs charged are reasonable.
5. Counsel for defendants shall have 15 days from service of the memorandum of costs and attorneys' fees in which to file a responsive memorandum addressing the reasonableness of the costs and fees sought, and any equitable considerations deemed appropriate for the court to consider in determining the amount of costs and fees which should be awarded.
